THE STOCKHOLM SUMMIT

Do you have the power to influence school education?
Would you like to be challenged, meet other influential educators from all over the world and discuss present and future challenges in the light of recent findings?

Join the Stockholm Summit for Top Level School Leaders 28–30 May 2012!

Third time lucky!

In May 2012 the third and last Stockholm Summit will be held.
We welcome all previous participants and new participants to join us 28–30 May in Stockholm for the concluding conference on school education. Top level school leaders from all over the world will once more gather and raise important and urgent questions about changes in education, how to prepare our young generation for future challenges we know little about.

The purpose of these three summits was to provide a meeting place for superintendents and other top level school officers where we could learn more about global trends and changes in school policy worldwide as well as focusing on local experience and draw conclusions for school improvement.

The first Stockholm Summit in 2008 focused on the role of the school leader between political demands and pedagogical practice, on leadership in a world of change, on leading processes of change.

The second Stockholm Summit in 2010 focused on the school leader's tools – systems for assessment and follow-up, evidence based school improvement and research as a driving force for change.

This third Stockholm Summit will focus on the responsibility of the school leader, the responsibility to provide the best possible conditions for every learner to learn, whether it is a pupil, a teacher, a school leader or an organization. It is for instance, important to be up to date with the latest findings in brain research and neurology in order to provide the best possible conditions for learning, to know when it is best to do what, how the brain can compensate, how art and music contributes to the development of higher, cognitive functions as well as physical training. In the light of this, we will continue our search for best practice in school leadership, processes of change, quality assessment and evidence based school improvement.

We are proud to present our four keynote speakers – Martin Ingvar, Michael Fullan, Helen Timperley and Avis Glaze. In addition to this, there will be ten seminars, a speed networking session and social events.
